

6. Would you say being a Student Trainer has had a significant or specific impact on you, whether in your personal development or employability skills?

I think it helped me understand the type of leadership I want to have. As a woman, I think you get to decide whether you want to be someone bossy and straightforward or more persuasive. Having people like Student Trainers developing different skills with each other means we give each other constructive criticism, it helps having someone else's opinion on yourself. I think I like to be persuasive, give some questions and plant a seed of thought. It works really well.
